EQUITY MARKETS CONTINUE TO STRENGTHEN

COMMENTARY

- Global equity markets strengthened in March as interest rate expectations fell and China continued to re-open
- Australian dollar weakness supported share market returns in AUD terms
- The Portfolio returned 6.7% in March, while the benchmark returned 3.8%

Global equity markets strengthened in March as investors turned their attention to hopes of an early peak in interest rates. The MSCI All Country World Index AUD gained 3.8%. The Fund outperformed the benchmark by 2.9% in Australian dollar terms as growth stocks outperformed value.

US inflation continued to trend down, falling to 6.0% year-on-year in February from 6.4% in January. Economic growth trends remained consistent with those seen in February as purchasing managers' data improved across the major economies.

China's manufacturing sector appeared to stagnate in March following modest expansion in February, while services continued to grow strongly. This reflects the country's pivot towards a more consumer-orientated economy, which is driving the recovery. China continues to make strong progress on re-opening the economy, which is supporting investor sentiment.

The Fund retains its focus on dynamic growth stocks. Positive revisions to earnings-per-share (EPS) can continue to drive outperformance as the economy moves into a period of weaker overall earnings growth. The Fund continues to overweight information technology, consumer discretionary, and health care while underweighting financials, energy, and materials.

Positive stock selection in financials, consumer discretionary, and industrials, the underweight in financials, and the overweight in information technology contributed to relative returns. Negative stock selection in materials and the underweight in communication services were the main detractors. Overweight positions in Hermes, Novo Nordisk, and ASML were the strongest contributors to relative performance, while overweight positions in Ameriprise and Albemarle and the underweight in Apple were the most significant detractors.

France-based luxury good house Hermes contributed to relative returns when it continued to outperform in March. This reflected its exposure to China's recovery and the strong demand for luxury goods more broadly. Earnings estimates continue to be revised upwards following its fourth quarter results, bringing potential for further earnings improvements.

Danish global pharmaceutical company Novo Nordisk focuses on the manufacturing and marketing of diabetes and obesity medications. It outperformed again in March, contributing to relative returns. This followed strong weekly sales data, leading to continued upwards revisions to earnings estimates for 2023 and beyond.

The holding in US-based retirement planning provider Ameriprise detracted from relative returns in March when it underperformed the market. This reflected negative sentiment towards the broader financial sector following the recent banking uncertainty.

The Fund's underweight position in US-based global technology group Apple detracted from relative returns when it outperformed in March. There was a significant allocation of assets away from banks into large technology groups, reflecting their defensive properties, strong balance sheets, and undemanding valuation levels.

The Fund's sector allocation was broadly unchanged during the month. It continued to increase exposure to semiconductor companies including Nvidia, Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company, and STMicroelectronics upon expectations of rising demand. Whilst not currently exposed to traditional banks, the Fund further reduced exposure to financials as the broader sector is expected to remain under pressure.

The Fund exited its position in Chinese e-commerce company JD.com during March after it published a disappointing earnings report. It forecast no immediate revenue growth as it pivots to a lower-priced strategy in the face of increasing competition.

In March the Fund engaged with US-based global entertainment company Live Nation. This followed concerns around its ticketing processes which attracted the attention of regulators and legislators. The company is now proactively engaging with legislators to better explain its economic model. It confirmed that regulatory issues remained the greatest investor concern, although an early resolution was unlikely. While the company's transparency was appreciated, the ongoing ESG risk led to the Fund reducing its holding.
