OCTOBER REPORT

COMMENTARY

- The Fund declined 5.8% in October, underperforming the MSCI All Country World Total Return in AUD (Hedged), which fell 1.4%. A sharp rotation away from generative AI related holdings was the dominant driver of weakness, with information technology and industrials detracting.
- Portfolio fundamentals remained dynamic. 82% of holdings received positive revisions during the month, well above the benchmark's 64%. Forward earnings growth continued to run ahead of the index, with underlying company trends viewed as broadly intact despite the sharp factor rotation.
- Key contributors included Cboe Global Markets following the extension of its S&P Dow Jones Indices licensing agreement, alongside Roche and AerCap. Detractors included Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company and Teradyne as generative AI related holdings came under broad pressure. The Fund initiated five new positions, broadening exposure beyond AI infrastructure.

Market Review

Global equity markets fell in October as a sharp selloff in generative AI related holdings drove a broad rotation across sectors and regions. The decline accelerated mid-month amid scrutiny of the financing and returns required to support the rapid expansion of AI infrastructure, compounded by persistent inflation and US election uncertainty. The Fund's currency hedge supported returns, as a stronger Australian dollar translated foreign currency exposures into lower Australian dollar terms for unhedged investors.

US equities fell as the move lower in technology and semiconductor stocks accelerated through the second half of the month, driven by investor focus on the capital intensity and projected returns of AI infrastructure investment. The underlying economic backdrop remained resilient, with manufacturing activity firming and jobless claims better than expected. Core inflation surprised modestly to the upside, reinforcing expectations of tighter monetary policy.

European equities also fell on the broader technology weakness. Regional growth remained uneven, with industrial activity in parts of the region offset by softening consumer demand in core economies. French consumer confidence deteriorated meaningfully, UK retail sales decelerated, and Spanish home sales improved. Core inflation remained elevated across the region.

Chinese equities remained under pressure, with the domestic backdrop continuing to deteriorate. Year to date property investment declined further, extending a prolonged contraction. Manufacturing survey data slipped back into contractionary territory, falling short of expectations, while core inflation remained subdued.

Portfolio Commentary

The Fund underperformed the benchmark in October. Information technology and industrials were the largest detracting sectors, with sector and factor rotation the main driver rather than company fundamentals. Financials and the underweight to materials provided partial offsets. Industrials and information technology remained the portfolio's largest overweights, with communication services and consumer discretionary the largest non-exclusionary underweights.

Cboe Global Markets, a leading global exchange operator, contributed following a 25 year extension of its S&P Dow Jones Indices licensing agreement. Roche, a Swiss pharmaceutical company, performed strongly on anticipation around its pipeline, including giredestrant, and benefited from a broader rotation into defensive health care names. AerCap, an Irish aircraft lessor, contributed following a strong quarterly result with a 42% earnings beat and an upward revision to full year guidance.

Conversely, Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company and Teradyne were the largest detractors as generative AI related holdings came under broad positioning driven selling that accelerated mid-month amid scrutiny of AI infrastructure financing and prospective returns. The team remains constructive on the long-term structural opportunity, with underlying AI adoption continuing to support the thesis, while reassessing more cyclical supply chain exposure.

Sector weightings shifted during the month, with financials and health care increased and information technology and industrials reduced, broadening exposure beyond AI infrastructure. The largest additions were to Meta Platforms, built out further on strong Muse adoption and engagement, Unilever, a global consumer staples company with defensive characteristics and operational upside potential, and Cintas, a US uniform rental and facility services provider, supported by its recurring revenue model and a potential UniFirst acquisition.

Reductions were led by Siemens Energy, trimmed to moderate AI infrastructure exposure after strong performance, Heico, a US aerospace aftermarket supplier reduced on cycle maturity concerns, and Societe Generale, trimmed on a less favourable French macroeconomic backdrop. Four further positions were initiated alongside Cboe. Hilton Worldwide Holdings and Welltower, a US senior housing focused health care REIT, were added for defensive growth supported by robust development pipelines and favourable demographic tailwinds respectively. Veeva Systems, a cloud software provider to the pharmaceutical industry, and Okta, a US identity security platform, were added on durable growth from clinical software adoption and the proliferation of autonomous agents in enterprise environments.

Underlying portfolio fundamentals remain supportive. Forward earnings growth of 25.8% continued to run ahead of the benchmark's 21.4%, while 82% of holdings received positive revisions, well above the benchmark's 64%. Valuation relative to growth moved broadly in line with the index, with the combination of durable growth and continued positive earnings momentum reinforcing the team's conviction in the strategy's dynamic growth approach.

On ESG, Alphabet was downgraded by MSCI to BB from BBB on weaknesses in governance, to be addressed in engagement. The team met with Unilever on sustainability strategy, where management highlighted a 77% reduction in Scope 1 and 2 emissions since 2015, alongside progress on plastic reduction, supplier decarbonisation, and living wage initiatives. The team encouraged greater transparency around supplier compliance and measurable emissions reduction targets.
